Trading Expertise Supports a Risk-Aware Approach

Trading and implementation are embedded within the investment team, as trading capabilities and infrastructure are considered important elements of the investment process. Through its differentiated and repeatable process, the trading group seeks to increase access to markets while reducing execution costs across instruments. The team's approach is risk-aware and designed to produce diversified sources of returns regardless of market direction. The risk management process includes managing market structure, counterparty, and liquidity risks and performing qualitative and quantitative analyses. The team's goal is to isolate investment risk and take positions when superior risk-adjusted returns are attractive. This high-conviction approach results in a portfolio positioned to take advantage of either side of the market cycle.

In addition, the portfolio is designed to have a low beta relative to many other fixed income and equity indexes, including the Bloomberg Global-Aggregate Total Return Index Value Unhedged USD Index and US Treasuries. The team's ability to use hedges helps mitigate interest rate risk.

Current and future portfolio holdings are subject to risk. The value of portfolio securities selected by the investment team may rise or fall in response to company, market, economic, political, regulatory or other news, at times greater than the market or benchmark index. A portfolio's environmental, social and governance ("ESG") considerations may limit the investment opportunities available and, as a result, the portfolio may forgo certain investment opportunities and underperform portfolios that do not consider ESG factors. Non-diversified portfolios may invest larger portions of assets in securities of a smaller number of issuers and performance of a single issuer may have a greater impact to the portfolio's returns. International investments involve special risks, including currency fluctuation, lower liquidity, different accounting methods and economic and political systems, and higher transaction costs. These risks typically are greater in emerging and less developed markets, including frontier markets, and include new and rapidly changing political and economic structures, which may cause instability; underdeveloped securities markets; and higher likelihood of high levels of inflation, deflation or currency devaluations. Fixed income securities carry interest rate risk and credit risk for both the issuer and counterparty and investors may lose principal value. In general, when interest rates rise, fixed income values fall. High yield securities (junk bonds) are speculative, experience greater price volatility and have a higher degree of credit and liquidity risk than bonds with a higher credit rating. Use of derivatives may create investment leverage and increase the likelihood of volatility and risk of loss in excess of the amount invested.

The Bloomberg Global-Aggregate Total Return Index Value Unhedged USD measures global investment grade debt from 24 local currency markets in both developed and emerging markets, including treasury, government-related, corporate, and securitized fixed-rate bonds. The index is unmanaged; includes net reinvested dividends; does not reflect fees or expenses; and is not available for direct investment.
