Commentary

Quarter to date, as the market's overall performance is being driven by large-cap and growth stocks, the Russell 1000® Value Index is down 2.14%. The energy, materials and industrials sectors are leading it lower, while real estate, utilities and consumer staples—defensive and interest rate sensitive sectors—are providing a small lift in an otherwise soft market. Our portfolio has outpaced the benchmark QTD, with stock selection in the industrials and health care sectors driving relative performance. Our below-benchmark exposure to the index's best performing sectors has been the primary detractor.

Technology behemoth and Google search parent Alphabet is the top contributor to our portfolio. The business posted strong results against modest expectations from investors who had pushed shares lower earlier in the year due to fears around slowing growth. Alphabet remains a top holding due to its fortress balance sheet, exceptional competitive position in multiple businesses and an undemanding valuation relative to a business with these characteristics.

AutoNation, an automobile retailer, is among the top contributors QTD, even though the stock price was relatively steady in August. Management has executed well by improving variable gross profit per vehicle, and the predictable, high-margin parts and service business is growing. In addition, a renewed emphasis on cost controls has supported the margin-focused efforts—a welcome surprise for investors.

Medtronic, the world's largest medical device manufacturer, has been another top contributor. While lower interest expense and tax rates have boosted the bottom line and resulted in higher EPS guidance, the company's robust product pipeline has also stoked investor optimism and lifted the valuation.

The largest QTD detractor is international tire manufacturer Michelin, which despite soft QTD returns generates strong free cash flow. A tough market environment and weaker sales volumes during Q2 led to lower-than-expected EBIT growth and a falling stock price. Management has reiterated its commitment to pricing discipline and expects to continue growing market share in the premium tire category.

Another detractor, multinational networking and business communications conglomerate Cisco Systems, is facing some cyclical headwinds; order growth is flattening out as corporate IT spend appears to be slowing. Despite the slowing growth, Cisco Systems has a below-market multiple, a net cash balance sheet, and its product portfolio looks well positioned for growth.

Carefully consider the Fund's investment objective, risks and charges and expenses. This and other important information is contained in the Fund's prospectus and summary prospectus, which can be obtained by calling 800.344.1770. Read carefully before investing.

International investments involve special risks, including currency fluctuation, lower liquidity, different accounting methods and economic and political systems, and higher transaction costs. These risks typically are greater in emerging markets. Securities of small- and medium-sized companies tend to have a shorter history of operations, be more volatile and less liquid and may have underperformed securities of large companies during some periods. Value securities may underperform other asset types during a given period.

Russell 1000® Value Index measures the performance of US large-cap companies with lower price/book ratios and forecasted growth values. Russell 1000® Index measures the performance of roughly 1,000 US large-cap companies. The index(es) are unmanaged; include net reinvested dividends; do not reflect fees or expenses; and are not available for direct investment.

For the purpose of determining the Fund's holdings, securities of the same issuer are aggregated to determine the weight in the Fund.
