

Investment Process

We seek to invest in companies that are uniquely positioned to benefit from the growth potential in emerging markets and that possess a sustainable global competitive advantage.

Sustainable Earnings

We believe over the long term a stock's price is directly related to the company's ability to deliver sustainable earnings. We determine a company's sustainable earnings based upon financial and strategic analyses. Our financial analysis of a company's balance sheet, income statement and statement of cash flows focuses on identifying historical drivers of return on equity. Our strategic analysis examines a company's competitive advantages and financial strength to assess sustainability.

Risk Analysis

We believe a disciplined risk framework allows greater focus on fundamental stock selection. We incorporate our assessment of company-specific, sustainability and macroeconomic risks into our valuation analysis to develop a risk-adjusted target price. Our risk-rating assessment includes a review of quantitative and qualitative ESG factors and country-appropriate macroeconomic risk factors to which a company is exposed.

Valuation

We believe that investment opportunities develop when businesses with sustainable earnings are undervalued relative to peers and historical industry, country and regional valuations. We value a business and develop a price target for a company based on our assessment of the business's sustainable earnings and risk analysis.

Team Overview

Team experience, continuity and a rigorous investment process are the characteristics that we believe differentiate our team from other emerging markets investment managers. Research analysts have autonomy and ownership of their regions and accountability for the success of their ideas. Our team members bring deep experience and uncommon insight to their respective areas of responsibility.

Past performance does not guarantee and is not a reliable indicator of future results. Performance is NAV to NAV, including reinvestment of dividends and capital gains, if any, and is net of fees and expenses, excluding any subscription or redemption charges which may be levied. At the moment, the Fund does not intend to charge subscription or redemption fees. The Fund may be offered in different share classes, which are subject to different fees, expenses and inception dates (which may affect performance), have different minimum investment requirements and are entitled to different services. An investor cannot invest directly in an index. The portfolio's returns may vary greatly over shorter periods due to the limited operating period since inception.

Investment Risks: Investments will rise and fall with market fluctuations and investor capital is at risk. Investors investing in funds denominated in non-local currency should be aware of the risk of currency exchange fluctuations that may cause a loss of principal. These risks, among others, are further described on the last page, which should be read in conjunction with this material.

Portfolio Discussion

Our portfolio outperformed the MSCI Emerging Markets Index in Q3. From a country perspective, India was our top contributor on a relative basis due to our above-benchmark exposure. Our Russia and Taiwan exposures were also nicely additive on a relative basis, while our Argentina exposure was a significant detractor.

Among our top Q3 relative contributors were Sino Biopharm, Polyus and Metropolis Healthcare.

Shares of Sino Biopharm, a pharmaceutical company with leading positions for hepatitis B virus and other liver diseases, have been aided by growth in the company's new, high-margin oncology drugs. In July, its Anlotinib drug—already used to treat advanced non-small-cell lung carcinoma—was approved in China for the treatment of soft-tissue sarcoma. In August, it reported results for the first half of 2019, including better-than-expected revenue growth and margin expansion. In September, the Chinese government announced an expansion of centralized generic drug purchasing, which hurt Chinese pharmaceuticals stocks. However, we expect the program will have a limited impact on Sino Biopharm given its strong pipeline of new drugs—more than 10 drugs received government production approvals in the first half of 2019. We believe its sustainable earnings growth profile will remain attractive over the long term.

Polyus, a Russian gold mining company, climbed alongside rising gold prices. We continue to like the company for its position as a low-cost producer, its limited capital spending and the likelihood of strong production growth in the coming years. In addition, we believe Polyus has made serious strides to improve its environmental, social and governance (ESG) practices. The company has been moving toward mining methods considerably cleaner and less damaging to the local environment, making concerted efforts to establish positive relationships with local communities, and establishing a generous and consistent dividend policy—while raising production by more than 60% in the last five years. Given these strengths, we find shares of Polyus to be attractively valued.

Metropolis Healthcare is an Indian medical diagnostics company. The marketplace in India is shifting toward organized and branded players such as Metropolis, which has one of the largest diagnostic lab chains in the country. Metropolis is focused on increasing its share in the higher-margin business-to-consumer (B2C) market. Revenues and earnings are also likely to get a boost through operating leverage as the company expands its geographical footprint. In addition, Metropolis should benefit from corporate tax cuts announced by India's government in September.

India was our top relative contributor at the country level in Q3. We have purposefully positioned our exposure to strong secular growth trends. Metropolis Healthcare is a good example of our approach to investing in India, as it is seizing on consumers' shifting preference toward branded players with a multi-state or national footprint. Additional secular trends that we find attractive include the rise of the urban middle class and its increased spending on more discretionary items, such as dining out and upscale shopping and entertainment, as well as the continued growth of digital services. We believe these trends have more room to play out as penetration remains relatively low in India.

Some of our positions have not been immune from India's recent slowdown. The ripple effects from the liquidity crisis originating in the non-bank financial system have negatively affected consumer sentiment and, in turn, our positions tied to domestic consumption. However, the trends of building more affordable housing and home improvement projects by India's growing middle class will likely pick up as economic conditions improve. We are cautiously optimistic that recently enacted corporate tax cuts can provide a boost to economic growth, but it will take time to see how companies choose to allocate these savings (i.e., reinvestment vs. passing benefits on to consumers). And our lone financials sector position, ICICI Bank, has already taken the appropriate steps to maintain a strong balance sheet and capital position, while having sustainable competitive advantages in the form of a solid local brand, well-scaled franchise and extensive domestic branch network.

Expanding on our view of sustainability in India, we are encouraged by a greater focus on ESG by companies and the government. We have noticed a distinct positive change in the levels of corporate transparency and communication with investors. In addition, a recent enhancement to the Companies Act reinforces the requirement for companies above a certain level of net profit, turnover or net worth to spend a set percentage of net profit on corporate social responsibility activities. Much of the environmental and social investment made by the Indian companies in our portfolio has been focused on helping local communities with education, food programs and sanitation infrastructure. The growing importance of sustainability for Indian companies is a supporting factor in our country overweight.

Among our bottom relative contributors in Q3 were Pampa Energia, Noah Holdings and ZhuZhou.

Pampa is the largest independent integrated energy company in Argentina, including electricity, oil and natural gas. In August, President Mauricio Macri was beaten in primary elections by a far greater margin than expected by the Peronist party ticket that includes former president Christina Fernandez. Subsequently announced capital controls also pressured Argentina's financial markets as investors weigh the potential return of populist policies, a further currency decline, a deep economic recession and a credit default. Given the heightened likelihood the government reinstates energy subsidies and freezes electricity rates, we exited our position in Pampa.

Noah Holdings is a leading wealth manager in China. In July, Noah disclosed its exposure to CNY 3.4 billion of credit products related to Camsing International, whose CEO was arrested by Chinese authorities over allegations of fraud. While the event raised market concerns regarding Noah's risk management practices, we are closely monitoring the situation and remain confident in Noah's management. Noah has taken several important steps to help recover clients' investments, and management has been cooperating with authorities and communicating regularly with investors. In our view, the negative effects of this event will fade, and we still believe Noah can expand its market share given its strong brand name and market-leading position, as well as its ability to deliver top-notch customer service to high net worth individuals.

Zhuzhou CRRC Times Electric provides and integrates train-borne electrical systems for China's railway industry. Shares of Zhuzhou were negatively affected by weak investment spending this year. However, China Railway announced the first round of a train procurement tender. We also believe another tender will likely be announced before the end of 2019 as China has completed additional high-speed railway lines. In addition, the market has assigned little valuation to Zhuzhou's insulated gate bipolar transistors (IGBT) business. IGBTs have a number of uses, including power electronics for the traction system of electric rail vehicles, and Zhuzhou is the only domestic producer. Furthermore, we believe the company's diversification into higher-margin end-markets—including electric vehicles and deep-sea robots—should help it stay relatively resistant to rail-industry cyclicity.

Portfolio Activity

As previously mentioned, during Q3 we exited our investment in Pampa Energia. Despite Argentina's country-level political and economic risks, we continue to see significant upside in select Argentine stocks. One such bright spot is Despegar.com, the largest online travel booking company in Latin America with the most downloaded travel app in the region. Despegar.com's stock price fell significantly following its 2017 initial public offering as difficult economic conditions in its core Brazil and Argentina markets and costs which outpaced revenues drove disappointing operational results. However, we believe financial markets are underestimating the company's strong positioning, regional growth opportunities and financial health. Despegar.com has used its position of strength during the economic crises to gain market share, while improvements in operational leverage are likely to increase its sustainable ROE well above the current ROE. Marketing efforts to increase vacation package bookings—which are more profitable than basic transactions such as booking flights—and the August announcement of a share buyback program representing nearly 15% of the market cap (22% of the share float) are also positive. While conditions in Argentina still pose a near-term risk, in our view, Despegar.com is well-positioned to weather the volatility.

Perspective

Sustainability is a critical aspect of what we do. To us, sustainability means having the ability to endure. It includes—but goes beyond—environmental, social and governance (ESG) considerations. More broadly, it entails businesses making the right strategic choices that bring continuity to their shareholders, employees, customers and the communities around them. Ultimately, we invest in emerging markets because as a team of people who were born, educated and have spent large amounts of time in these countries, we want to direct capital to companies that can have a long-term positive impact on emerging markets' people.

We do what we do because we care passionately about the people of emerging markets—which, as investors, implies caring about their economies and markets as well, given our belief that economic growth will ultimately lead to better lives and futures for these populations. As a result, we have spent some two decades developing a rigorous investment approach that simultaneously attempts to leave no stone unturned while avoiding companies not committed to growing sustainably over time. While we recognize emerging markets will likely always be inherently more volatile than developed markets, we believe the rewards over time should likewise be outsized. Furthermore, we believe the effort required to find companies behind which we are interested in putting our capital is eminently worthwhile.

Investment Risks: International investments involve special risks, including currency fluctuation, lower liquidity, different accounting methods and economic and political systems, and higher transaction costs. These risks typically are greater in emerging markets. Such risks include new and rapidly changing political and economic structures, which may cause instability; underdeveloped securities markets; and higher likelihood of high levels of inflation, deflation or currency devaluations. Securities of small- and medium-sized companies tend to have a shorter history of operations, be more volatile and less liquid and may have underperformed securities of large companies during some periods. These risks, among others, are further described in the Fund Documents.

Further details, including risks, fees and expenses, are set out in the current Prospectus, Supplements and Key Investor Information Documents (KIID), which can be obtained by calling +44 (0) 20 7766 7130 or visiting www.artisanpartnersglobal.com. Read carefully before investing.
