For Institutional Investors – Not for Onward Distribution

Investment Process

Our investment approach is based on idea generation, a systematic framework for analyzing companies and proactive risk management. Utilizing this approach, we seek to construct a focused portfolio designed to maximize alpha while limiting downside risk over the long term.

Idea Generation

We believe a key element in alpha generation is finding areas where our views on industry fundamentals differ from consensus estimates. In this pursuit, we seek to identify inflections in multi-year trends which may be caused by changes in supply/demand dynamics, societal behavior, market conditions, technology, laws/regulations and business models, among other variables. We believe these inflections are often misunderstood by market participants, and can lead to powerful re-ratings of industries and companies. Identifying themes helps us develop a focused universe of companies to analyze more thoroughly.

Systematic Analytical Framework

We apply a systematic framework for analyzing companies across sectors and themes, creating a repeatable and methodical decision-making process. Our proprietary company models focus on multi-year earnings power differentiation, expected outcome scenario analysis, return on invested capital and discounted cash flow valuations. Visual outputs are then produced through our internally developed technology solutions, allowing us to consistently evaluate positions across the portfolio.

Proactive Risk Management

We incorporate risk management into all stages of our investment process. Metrics evaluated include crowding, correlation, volatility, stress tests, liquidity, factor analysis and macro drivers, all of which inform portfolio construction and position sizing. We also use various instruments, such as options, in an effort to magnify alpha and minimize downside.

Past performance does not predict future returns. Performance is NAV to NAV, including reinvestment of dividends and capital gains, if any, and is net of fees and expenses, excluding any subscription or redemption charges which may be levied. At the moment, the Fund does not intend to charge subscription or redemption fees. The Fund may be offered in different share classes, which are subject to different fees, expenses and inception dates (which may affect performance), have different minimum investment requirements and are entitled to different services. Funds are actively managed and are not managed to a benchmark index.

Investment Risks: Investments will rise and fall with market fluctuations and investor capital is at risk. Investors investing in funds denominated in non-local currency should be aware of the risk of currency exchange fluctuations that may cause a loss of principal. These risks, among others, are further described on the last page, which should be read in conjunction with this material.

"We will not settle for mediocrity."

—Deion Sanders, "Coach Prime"

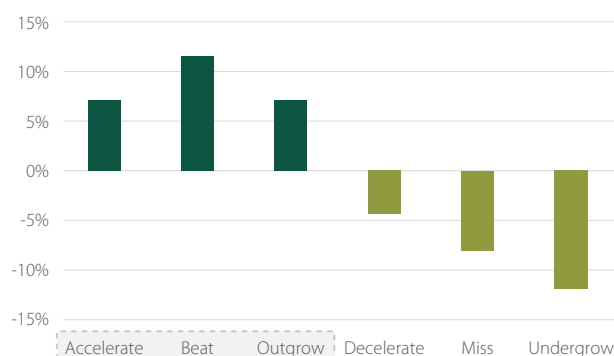

In Denver, the Antero Peak Group's headquarters, the impact that "Coach Prime" has had on the University of Colorado football program is a persistent source of local news and headlines. While his outspoken, aggressive, unrestricted, nothing-is-sacred style may not resonate with everyone, his drive to succeed and willingness to push change in the face of mediocrity is something we respect.

In our team's seven years, we have seen some exceptional highs, with long periods markedly outpacing the benchmark with lower volatility and higher downside protection. On the other hand, our recent results have been frustrating, and we don't take them lightly. Like Sanders, we will not settle for this kind of mediocrity and are moving aggressively to address weaknesses while holding discipline to our empirically proven process and execution.

In Q3 2023, the Artisan US Focus Fund—Class I USD lost -6.73%. The portfolio mostly tracked the move in bonds as nominal yields spiked in the quarter. At the sector level, our unfavorable relative performance for the quarter can be principally attributed to our overweight in utilities and our underweight in energy along with yields amplified by idiosyncratic concerns at NextEra Energy. Yet again, the "Magnificent Seven" closed the quarter at YTD highs versus the S&P 500® Index and its equal-weighted counterpart. This spread between the two benchmarks, unfortunately, has been an ongoing headwind all year—160bps in Q3 and roughly 1,130bps on the year.

A key factor in our year-to-date results, along with other portfolio's results, has been the divergence of major benchmarks. Through Q3, the Russell 2000® Index and S&P 500® Equal Weight Index gained just 2.51% and 1.78%, respectively. On the surface, our gain of 3.53% appears unexciting but not disconcerting. Meanwhile, the largest seven stocks have returned 55%—accounting for an incredible 28% of the benchmark as of this writing. Although this idiosyncratic risk has been a challenge for us, we nevertheless remain steadfast and anchored to our process, which shows over time that companies that beat earnings, outgrow the market and show acceleration can materially outperform the broader index.

Exhibit 1: S&P 500® Index Constituents Follow a Reliable Pattern
10-Year Median Performance of S&P Constituents Categorized by EPS

Source: FactSet/S&P/Antero Peak Group. Based on S&P 500® Index constituents from 30 Sep 2009 to 30 Sep 2022. Rolling 10-year performance based on constituents in the S&P 500® Index and categorization has been determined by the Antero Peak Group. Categories are rebalanced every September 30 over the trailing 10-year period based on the following criteria—Accelerate: Future EPS growth in upcoming year is greater than previous year; Beat: EPS is greater than expected 12 months prior; Outgrow: EPS growth rate is in excess of the S&P 500® Index. Decelerate: Future EPS growth in upcoming year is less than previous year; Miss: EPS is less than expected 12 months prior; Undergrow: EPS growth rate is less than the S&P 500® Index.

Our process is centered around research. We buy stocks on the edge of inflection points that lead to earnings differentiation, have accelerating fundamentals and secular tailwinds, and have paths to expanding ROIC. We seek to control relative volatility through factor alignment with the S&P 500® Index within defined risk bands. The approach has generally allowed us to maximize our research. We do not buy individual stocks simply to "control" portfolio spread to the benchmark, and our work supports a continuation of this approach. We believe the disconnect in recent years is unusual, and we intend to capitalize on this by remaining committed in our core process.

Market Concentration and Breadth in the Context of History

The current construction of the benchmark compared to history and its future direction have been topics of discussion with many of our investors, and we think some context will be helpful. The current levels of concentration create idiosyncratic risks for active managers that traditional risk models struggle to alleviate. Yet, we ultimately see it as greater opportunity for active managers to stand out and create alpha, particularly on a risk-adjusted basis. Conversely, we see an increasing overall risk profile for passive investments as a result.

While we do not expect the largest stocks to account for the quantum of return that we've seen in the last year very often, it is important for us, and all investors, to recognize some of the new realities of the S&P 500® Index. We are currently in a new regime of relative concentration, and Exhibit 2 depicts the concentration of benchmark weightings for the largest 5 and 10 stocks.

Exhibit 2: S&P 500® Index Weight of the Largest 5 and 10 Stocks, Last 20 Years

Source: Antero Peak Group/Bloomberg. As of 30 Sep 2023.

The relative performance of the largest names has widened materially in recent years versus the average stock. Exhibit 3 shows the absolute value of return contribution to the index of the largest five companies. For the 15-year period beginning in 2003, the top five names contributed 1.5% annually to the total benchmark's return. In the last five years, this has skyrocketed to 8.3% annually.

Exhibit 3: Contribution From the Largest Stocks Has Become Notably Larger in Recent Years

This is occurring partly because sector diversification of the top five (excluding Berkshire Hathaway) has been eliminated. Twenty years ago, the energy, industrial, health care and technology sectors were all represented in the much smaller top 5%. Today, only one sector is represented (if you place Amazon within tech).

Exhibit 4: Sectors Represented in the Top 5, 20-Year Change

This had led to higher correlation within the largest companies. The correlation itself has surprised us, as these stocks have tended to trade together despite the fundamentals being different—encompassing software, cloud, advertising, auto production, consumer hardware and semiconductors with different secular and cyclical drivers as you can see from Exhibit 5.

Exhibit 5: Internal Correlation Across the Largest Five Stocks (ex-Berkshire) Has Also Been Much Higher Than Normal

This has occurred with much lower fundamental correlation than most would have expected. The correlation shown in Exhibit 6 is effectively insignificant.

Warranted Versus Temporary

Index construction explains some of the divergence that we view will be temporary. The S&P 500® Index is a float-adjusted market-cap-weighted index. As such, the benchmark weightings are often disconnected from actual contribution to earnings over the short term. While the market weightings generally converge toward a level commensurate with contribution to earnings over long periods of time, the divergences over the short term can be meaningful.

An example of this has occurred over the last three years. As you can see in Exhibit 7, Apple, Nvidia, Microsoft and Tesla have risen to weights well in excess of their added contribution to the S&P 500® Index's overall earnings. This collectively has added an "unwarranted" 510bps to the S&P 500® Index. That is not to say it is wrong, yet it does place greater emphasis on future earnings follow through for those companies. We think this creates substantial idiosyncratic alpha opportunities going forward.

Exhibit 7: Spread Between Added Earnings and Added Weighting of the S&P 500® Index Over the Last Three Years

Net Spread Between Added Earnings and Market Cap
Apple	2.0%	Alphabet	(0.3)%
Nvidia	1.0%	Amazon	(0.2)%

Telsa	1.3%
Total	5.1%	Total	(0.7)%
Total Net Addition		4.5%

Source: Antero Peak Group/Bloomberg. As of 30 Sep 2023.

This effect is even more pronounced if we look at 2023 alone. Every member of the Magnificent Seven has experienced a greater increase in weighting than its actual contribution growth in share of earnings in 2023. This effect is displayed in Exhibit 8.

Exhibit 8: Spread Between Added Earnings and Added Weighting of the S&P 500® Index in 2023

Source: Antero Peak Group/Bloomberg. As of 30 Sep 2023.

Of note is the current high directional correlation among these names relative to history. This is perplexing to us because the top three contributors—Apple, Tesla and Microsoft—have experienced negative revisions to 2023 and 2024 estimates. This metric is the strongest historical indicator for performance based on our empirical analysis. We held zero exposure to Apple and Tesla at any point this year, which both experienced negative revisions while making a material addition to the index. We emphasized Nvidia and Meta, and more recently Microsoft. Nvidia and Meta experienced the highest revisions in the group. In short, our earnings work in this group was not far off but has been punished severely thus far, and we think this is highly unlikely to be repeated.

Where to From Here?

Over time, we expect index weight changes, i.e., net contributions to overall benchmark returns, will follow earnings. Based on consensus estimates today, assuming no material change in float and holding multiples remain constant, the rate of change in weightings should slow materially over the next several years, setting up well for active management.

Exhibit 10: Warranted Change in Caption Size Is Set to Slow Down

On a more granular level, Apple has experienced a 10 multiple point re-rating and is heading into a period of sub-market growth. This re-rating is likely not to be repeated, in our view. Meanwhile, we expect only Amazon and Nvidia to have the potential to materially alter the current weighting structure to the upside as both companies should continue to see strong earnings growth in excess of the broader market and could continue to see their index weightings grow. Amazon is focusing on driving profits in its retail business, while its cloud business continues to take share. Nvidia, similarly, continues to see strong secular demand for its high-performance GPUs as AI demands grow globally, accelerating its revenue growth. Exhibit 11 represents a hypothetical weighting if every multiple was held constant.

We think even Amazon's depressed current level of profitability is driving the elevated multiple, and thus the growth in Amazon's weighting has likely been front-run. In that sense, we would not be surprised if the weighting of this group of stocks shrinks over the coming years.

What This Means for Us

While positioning within this large group has been painful for us this year, we do not believe it is a time to fundamentally change what we do. We will continue to invest in companies facing inflection points that lead to upward estimate revisions and avoid companies with downward revisions even if they are large components of the benchmark. This presents much more opportunity than risk to us as a relative benchmarked product and sets up very favorably into 2024, in our view.

Exhibit 12 lays out how our portfolio compares to the benchmark on our key metrics outlined into next year. We view this as a highly alpha-generative backdrop within an expanding thematic opportunity set that has been discussed at length in the past year.

An Update on the Earnings Backdrop

The downward earnings cycle is clearly maturing, and leading indicators like the ISM are near trough levels. Yet, we think the revisions cycle is far from in the clear. During the quarter, we saw some signs of stabilization after 18 months of downward revisions as estimates were largely unchanged during Q3. Federal Reserve actions still need to propagate through the economy on a lag while nominal rates and cost of capital continue to surge higher. We continue to focus on our bottom-up process while placing modest assumptions for growth in our models.

Of particular concern are margins, which remain elevated. This, coupled with currently high employment levels and tightening liquidity, creates asymmetric downside risk. Exhibit 13 shows the implied margins needed to hit current consensus estimates over the next two years. This appears unlikely to be achieved and already factors in a sharp upturn in leading indicators like the ISM.

A new dimension has also entered the earnings outlook: interest rates. During the pandemic, bond issuance exploded as companies began to hoard cash given the scope of uncertainty that COVID brought. This debt was borrowed at exceptionally low interest rates and mostly held as cash on the balance sheets of investment grade firms. Given the medium- to long-duration nature of IG corporate debt, many high-quality companies are experiencing a windfall of interest expense as short-dated securities held in cash receive higher returns. The average cost of net debt has collapsed in this period from 3.5% to 1.5%.

This “carry trade,” however, is a temporary phenomenon that will present further earnings uncertainty in the coming years.

With respect to yields, we also believe that history often repeats itself or rhymes. Exhibit 15 depicts the path forward for yields after the Federal Reserve stops raising rates. As shown, in every situation yields have meaningfully dropped.

Summary

As we look to the remainder of 2023 and beyond, we feel good about the portfolio and its positioning relative to our key process criteria, even amid a challenging earnings environment. Beyond this, we expect the high levels of concentration to present an opportunity for us as active managers to enhance risk-adjusted relative returns as we view this year’s decoupling from revisions and growth as temporary. This contention is supported by a long-term analysis of S&P 500® Index performance that shows strong evidence of revisions, acceleration and growth being the primary drivers of equity relative performance.

We appreciate your ongoing support and trust with your capital. We will continue to work relentlessly to provide you with the best risk-adjusted outcomes. Like Deion Sanders, we are constantly looking to improve our game and upgrade our talent. Within the quarter, we brought on a senior TMT analyst. Lastly, as we’ve shared

Non-diversified portfolios may invest larger portions of assets in securities of a smaller number of issuers and performance of a single issuer may have a greater impact to the portfolio's returns. Use of derivatives may create investment leverage and increase the likelihood of volatility and risk of loss in excess of the amount invested. High portfolio turnover may adversely affect returns due to increased transaction costs and creation of additional tax consequences. Securities of small- and medium-sized companies tend to have a shorter history of operations, be more volatile and less liquid and may have underperformed securities of large companies during some periods. International investments involve special risks, including currency fluctuation, lower liquidity, different accounting methods and economic and political systems, and higher transaction costs. These risks typically are greater in emerging and less developed markets, including frontier markets. The costs associated with this fund will impact your return over time. Investments will rise and fall with market fluctuations and investor capital is at risk. Investors investing in funds denominated in non-local currency should be aware of the risk of currency exchange fluctuations that may cause a loss of principal. These risks, among others, are further described in the Fund Documents.
